

THE NEVILLE MYSTERY.

The Coroner's Investigation—Testimony Elicited Relative to the Matter.

The inquest to investigate into the cause of the death of the late Mr. Edward Neville, proprietor of the Kings County Hotel, was resumed yesterday, at 10 o'clock, at the Henry Clay House, corner of South Seventh street and Dunham place, Williamsburg, before Coroner Hanson and a jury. The following is the evidence:

Bernard L. Van Nostrand, residing at the corner of Nineteenth street and Third avenue, Brooklyn, on Saturday morning, at half past seven o'clock, I went down to the shore of the Kings County Hotel, and saw a dead body lying on the shore. I went to the body, and found it was that of a man. I took the body to the Kings County Hotel, and showed it to the Coroner. The Coroner told me to go home again, and when I came back, I found the body was still there. I went to the body, and found it was that of a man. I took the body to the Kings County Hotel, and showed it to the Coroner. The Coroner told me to go home again, and when I came back, I found the body was still there. I went to the body, and found it was that of a man. I took the body to the Kings County Hotel, and showed it to the Coroner. The Coroner told me to go home again, and when I came back, I found the body was still there.

Dr. Ernest Kretschmer, sworn—I am a physician and surgeon. I made a post mortem examination of the body of Edward Neville at the dead-house on the 24th instant; the body was in a very good state of preservation, the face was plump, the skin was of a healthy color, there was no mark of violence on the skin, the skin on the chest and the upper part of the stomach was slightly discolored, the lungs were in a very good state of preservation, the heart was in a very good state of preservation, the stomach was in a very good state of preservation, the intestines were in a very good state of preservation, the bladder was in a very good state of preservation, the rectum was in a very good state of preservation, the testes were in a very good state of preservation, the penis was in a very good state of preservation, the urethra was in a very good state of preservation, the bladder was in a very good state of preservation, the rectum was in a very good state of preservation, the testes were in a very good state of preservation, the penis was in a very good state of preservation, the urethra was in a very good state of preservation.

Q. Could there have been any external violence? A. If there had been none on the parts that were waiting, there was no need to mention it. The body was waiting for the parts waiting upon the scalp and hands by chafing against some hard substance while in the water. There could have been no external violence. Q. By a juror, I understood you to say that he might have received a blow that stunned him, and while in that state he might have been thrown into the water? A. Yes, sir. I am positive of his having been drowned from the fact that the blood was not coagulated in the veins, the white frontal bone was bare, with the exception of a small portion of the scalp remaining on the forehead. The body was waiting for the parts waiting upon the scalp and hands by chafing against some hard substance while in the water. There could have been no external violence.

Q. Providing Mr. Neville had been overcome in a scuffle, by a scuffle over him or otherwise, would there have been any marks on his body? A. It was a powerful man, I do not think he could have been overcome in a scuffle. The body was waiting for the parts waiting upon the scalp and hands by chafing against some hard substance while in the water. There could have been no external violence. EVACUATION DAY.

Its Celebration—Military Review—Governor Clark Slightly Excited—The Veterans Dismayed, etc.

The twenty-second anniversary of the return of Evacuation Day was celebrated appropriately yesterday, by an imposing military parade and review in the Park by the authorities.

The weather was all that could be desired, mild, sunny and balmy—a pleasant mixture of the most agreeable characteristics of spring and autumn. The streets were disagreeable to pedestrians, owing to the recent rainy weather, and the military officers did not a little in their appearance and marching from the mud.

As the Common Council made no appropriation this year for the proper observance of the day, what was done was voluntary on the part of our citizens. In the way of parading and festivities. Flags, banners and appropriate devices adorned nearly all our hotels, theatres and public buildings, and in many instances the ships in the harbor were gayly decked with flags and streamers.

A holiday was given to all the scholars in the public schools, and many old Knickerbockers obtained from business in honor of the day. The streets along the line of the procession were crowded with "fair men and brave men," and the vicinity of the Park was alive with excitement. The military display of yesterday was very fine indeed for number and discipline, the First division of New York State Militia never appearing to greater advantage.

Nearly all the infantry regiments turned out in heavy marching order, with the recently introduced gray overcoats, which added not a little to the uniformity and beauty of the display. Of late years, the number of our city soldiery have increased, and there could not have been less than 6,000 men under arms yesterday. These are not all Americans; indeed, the Irish, and particularly the Scotch, were by far the largest.

The Veterans of 1812, who were present in great numbers, were by far the most numerous. They were all well, and many of them were still in the prime of life.
